Blood Smears On Trousers and Shirt Lead To Arrest of Hawaiian

HIS STORY TOLD POLICE FULL OF CONTRADICTIONS

Mother of Murdered Children Saw Him Leaving Shack Where Bodies Were Found

Suspected by the police of being the perpetrator of one of the bloodiest and most brutal murders that ever shocked Honolulu, Keawekane, a Hawniian, twenty years old, is held at the police station. He is believed by the officers to be the man who early yesterday killed two little Hawaiian boys, Kama and George Kanulia, nine and thirteen years old, respectively, with an axe and

Keawekane denies any complicity in or knowledge of the crime, but the police say they found blood on his legs, the bottom of his trousers and the back of his shirt, and that there is other evidence connecting him with the

No reason has yet been adduced for the brutal murder of the two little boys. They were alone in a cabin far Makiki Valley when they were ap Makiki Valley were found, it was wound when the frantic mother of the boys entered her home to find them both lying dead, in their blood.

No charge has yet been placed against Keawekane. He is being held for investigation.

Believed Mentally Defective

Keawekane is said to be mentally defective. He served a term in the re form school, and the police stated last gation and action." night that when there he was generally looked upon as half-witted. Later Keawekane was in the employ of the gas company and, according to the police again, was discharged on the ground that he was mentally deficient.

He will visit in England twenty years ago, and it he was met, he says, by Keawekane, the Crockett and San Francisco refinerhe was met, he says, by Keawekane, who wanted to lead him to the house where the bodies lay.

The young Hawaiian took Aseb to near the cabin but then, apparently er. Asch then noticed, he says, that Keawekane's feet and legs were spinshed with blood, that there was blood on the bottom of his trousers and that there was a big smear of it on his shirt. The trousers had no buttons and were held up by strings. Asch declares that they had just been changed. Keawekane's Story

Bloody tracks of bare feet were found on a mat in the house where the two little bodies lay. Questioned concerning these, Keawekane said that he had gone into the house with the boys' mother after the crime was discovered and had stepped into a pool of blood. The blood smear on his shirt he ex-plained by saying that when Mrs. Knnuha saw her sons lying dead, she tried to pick one of them up, and then grasped Keawekane by the shirt, stainng it with the blood on her hands.

At the time Mrs. Kanuha was too hysterical to make any statement in this regard, but later in the day, when she had in some degree regained her composure, she denied that she had entered the house or had seen Keawekane do so, She said, however, that she saw Keawekane come out of the house.

Mother Tells Her Story The mother told the deputy sheriff that she and her family had lived in the house only one night. She said that her husband, who is a laborer employed on the Kalakana Avenue road work, told the family Sunday that they were to move that day from Moililli to the shack in Makiki Valley.

PLANTERS SENDING MINING COMPANY SUGAR EXPERT TO VISIT REFINERIES ELECTS OFFICE

Dr. R. S. Norris Will Leave To-Tour Seeking Data For Im-

To make a thorough investigation of the refining value of Hawaiian raw sugar as compared with other sugars, Dr. R. S. Norris, sugar technologist for the Hawaiian Sugar Planters' Association experiment station, will leave for the mainland tomorrow on a coast to coast tour of sugar refineries.

His trip is the result of an exhaustive discussion at the annual meeting of the association last month on the com-plaints made by mainland refineries against the refining value of local sug-ars. Doctor Norris submitted a lengthy report on the properties of Hawaiian raw sugars which affect their refluing values and dealt in detail with the criticisms of the refluers, the properties of Cuban and Porto Rican sugars praised by the refiners and the alleged faults of Hawsiish sugars, making ex-tensive comparisons of many samples.

The upshot of the discussion on the report was an agreement to do every-thing possible to satisfy the demands of the refiners so that local sugars would be above criticism, and at the same time seek accurate data on what was the basis of the criticisms.

The consensus of opinion at the an nual meeting and the conclusion reached by Doctor Norris in presenting his re-port was that reliable information on the subject was lacking and that information and data thus far secured was conflicting and confusing.
